Faceless man robs Farmers Deposit

Suspect walks unnoticed on Pike Street into bank branch

By Josh Shepherd, News writer

Cynthiana police are investigating a strange midday robbery of Farmer's Deposit Bank on the corner of Main and Pike streets Monday.

Bank security cameras captured multiple angles of a person of medium to large build walking into the branch bank right at noon and leaving less than a minute later with a handful of loose cash from one of the teller drawers.

The perpetrator appeared in the video with his head covered by a white hood and face covered by a blank, black fabric of sheer material. Work gloves covered his hands. Not a single feature of the perpetrator was visible.

Besides the robbery taking place at the noon hour on a busy downtown street, other unusual features of the event, according to Cynthiana Det./Sgt. Alan Judy, is that cameras show the robber in full disguise walking outside the bank window on Pike Street followed by another pedestrian.

The robber entered the front door carrying an unidentified black bag at his shoulder, walked straight to the bank teller on duty and demanded money from the drawer.

There is no clear indication of a weapon being used to threaten the teller, Judy said. However, the robber does appear to make threatening gestures that suggest that he might possess a weapon.

The teller quickly and calmly handed wads of loose cash from one of the drawers to the thief, then complied with his apparent demand to lie on the floor behind the counter while he left by the way he entered on Pike Street.

A security camera at the bank's back door on Main Street captured the escaping thief, still in disguise, walking quickly south on foot.

As soon as the robber left the premises, police and sheriff's deputies were alerted to the robbery.

While Cynthiana Police Chief Ray Johnson interviewed the victim and investigated the crime scene, a search of the immediate area was launched for the robber.

A suspicious vehicle seen driving the wrong way on Waterworks Road at a fast rate of speed was pulled over by police on U.S. 27 south. A brief investigation revealed that the person in question, though wanted on an unrelated warrant, was not involved in the robbery.

No other possible subjects were detained or arrested in the ensuing search.

Specific details of the robbery were withheld while an investigation is being conducted.

Calls and e-mails requesting comment from Farmer's Deposit Bank leadership were not returned.

Persons who may have information about the robbery or the perpetrator are asked to contact the Cynthiana Police Department at 859-234-7157.

City delays action in police chief's grievance

By Becky Barnes, Editor

After nearly eight hours of testimony and deliberation, the Cynthiana City Commission admonished fellow commissioner Walter Tapp for his actions immediately after assuming the role of safety commissioner and his involvement with the sale of 29 guns.

The commission also agreed to meet individually with Cynthiana Police Chief Ray Johnson and Tapp and present their findings back to the commission on Tuesday, April 28.

Tuesday's hearing was the result of a grievance filed Jan. 5 by Chief Johnson against Commissioner Tapp just three days after Tapp took office.

City Attorney John Lair advised all parties that the hearing was not a removable hearing.

"We do believe this is an impeachable offense," said Attorney Jim Thomas, who represented Johnson.

Thomas and attorney David Fuller, who represented Tapp, each gave opening statements that set the tone for the hearing.

Thomas said he would show that Tapp had taken action against the chief that was not in the best interest of the department.

"These actions were motivated by personal feelings," Thomas asserted.

He explained that the result of a grievance filed last year by a contingent of police officers, including Tapp, who has since retired, against the chief wanted the chief to have better communications within his department.

The 2014 grievance, Thomas said, contained several allegations against the chief, some were of conflict in the department and others of corruption.

"Not one of those charges turned out to be true," Thomas said, noting that those who had signed the initial grievance against the chief recanted their allegations and cited the need for better communication.

Thomas maintained that Tapp decided to run for commissioner with the goal to get rid of Johnson.

He claimed that Tapp ran for safety commissioner, not just a commissioner spot.

At the Jan. 2 meeting where commissioners' positions were assigned, Tapp requested to represent the safety departments.

Thomas said Commissioner Billy Grayson asked Tapp twice if there would be a conflict of interest since Tapp had only recently retired from the department.

According to Thomas, Tapp responded that there would be no issue or conflict.

Thomas said the chronology of the events then unfolded after the meeting in which Tapp was appointed safety commissioner.

The chief goes to shake the hand and congratulate Tapp. Allegedly after Tapp walked away, assistant chief Bill Denton advised Johnson that Tapp called a meeting of the "command staff." That meeting would take place at 4 p.m., about 30 minutes after the assigning meeting, in Denton's office. The command staff included Tapp, Johnson,

AG rep hits high points of heroin bill

By Josh Shepherd, News writer

A needle exchange program, one of the more controversial programs that new Kentucky heroin legislation permits, has received support from the Harrison County Board of Health, according to Harrison County Judge-Executive Alex Barnett.

He announced the board's support of the program at the conclusion of the Champions for a Drug Free Harrison County community meeting Monday night.

Barnett also expressed thanks on to Kentucky Deputy Attorney General Sean Riley and another staff member from the Attorney General's office, Drew Jenkins, for presenting an overview of the new heroin legislation for members of the Harrison County community.

As the chief law enforcement body for the state of Kentucky, Riley outlined several steps that Attorney General Jack Conway and his office have taken to combat the commonwealth's persistent drug problem.

With regard to the abuse of prescription drugs five years ago, Riley credited the Attorney General's office with cracking down on the trafficking with approximately 450 arrests and the 2009 Flamingo Road bust, one of the largest sting operations in Kentucky history, that put over 500 dealers behind bars.

However, Riley did say that one of the unfortunate results of the state's efforts to crack down on pill mills is the rise in heroin abuse.

"Pills became much more difficult for dealers to peddle and for addicts to acquire. So there came a spike in heroin abuse," Riley said.

It took two legislative terms, but Riley called the new heroin legislative package a "good start" in the effort to stem the tide of addiction and abuse of this destructive opiate.

There are four main points of emphasis in the heroin legislation, Riley said.

For law enforcement, the law increases the penalties on heroin traffickers and dealers. Those found guilty of trafficking up to two grams of heroin face from five to 10 year prison sentences, rather than just one to five years.

Traffickers found guilty of trafficking in quantity exceeding two grams could face prison sentences of up to 20 years, Riley said,

However, the legislation also includes increasing access to treatment for those suffering from heroin addiction. Medicaid reimbursement is approved for substance abuse treatment, Riley said.

The state also included a provision allowing communities the option of establishing local needle exchange programs. It is not a requirement, he said, and communities would have to have local funding for the program. But there is evidence that a needle exchange program can be an effective outreach program to addicts.

"It gives health care providers a contact point to a person struggling with addiction," he said.

Riley also pointed out that there is a significant public health benefit associated with needle exchange programs. He cited the alarming surge in HIV infections last year in Scott County, Indiana. The infections were a direct result of dirty needles being shared among addicts, he said.

While he acknowledged the criticism that supplying addicts with fresh needles may be enabling their disease, controlling the spread of blood-borne diseases like HIV and Hepatitis C outweighs the downside.

Jesse Jones

Jones named building inspector/ code enforcement officer

By Josh Shepherd, News writer

After a brief stint working with building and code enforcement in Lexington, Jesse Jones is glad to be back in a small town again.

"It's time to trade in my Prius and get back into a four-wheel drive," Jones said with an easy and relaxed grin.

Jones is the new Harrison County code enforcement and building inspector with the Planning and Zoning Commission. He accepted the job offer about three weeks ago and has been making the rounds to meet with local city and county leaders and businesses.

His position was created last year by mutual agreement of the Cynthiana City Commission and the Harrison County Fiscal Court to combine city building code enforcement and county nuisance enforcement. The position would be under the supervision of the Cynthiana-Harrison County-Berry Joint Planning Commission.

Since getting approval from local government, Bonnie Skinner, Planning Commission administrator, said that the search committee spent several months searching for a candidate who would make a good fit with the community.

Jones, who was born and raised in Sadieville, worked in the code enforcement office in neighboring Georgetown for nearly a decade before accepting an open position with Lexington-Fayette Urban County Government.

He said the Fayette County position presented an opportunity for him to see what working in a faster-paced urban environment was like.

He enjoyed working with colleagues in Lexington, but there was a side to the job to which this self-described "small town boy" could not adjust.

"There was so much work that we had to get done, there was no time to get to know anyone. I would go to a building site or do an inspection, then hand them my paperwork and go on to my next appointment," Jones said.

It's these experiences that teach people about their likes and preferences. Jones discovered a preference for small community work over large cities.

"There are very good people who are built for that environment. I just don't happen to be one of them," Jones said.

While there are more chain stores and retail outlets in Georgetown, there are more similarities between it and Cynthiana than there are differences.

"I prefer to build relationships with business owners and developers. I want to be of service to people, not an adversary," Jones said.

Codes and regulations are there to add value and reduce depreciation on properties. In his work in Georgetown, he preferred to work directly with local builders and home owners, he continued.

After only a few weeks, Jones' time has been spent introducing himself to local leaders and people with whom he needs to build positive relationships.

One thing he did notice, though, is that neither Harrison County, Cynthiana nor Berry have a consistent set of building standards or codes.

He recommends adoption of the International Property Maintenance Codes to establish a common standard. The publication consists of just 26 pages, Jones said, and its guidelines are clear and easy to follow.

"By holding everyone to a common set of standards, which are followed by the majority of developing communities, we create an even playing field for everyone," Jones commented. "The important thing is for my office to be consistent."

There have already been open houses and opportunities for people to meet Jones. Once he gets married later in the year, he has plans to locate and make Harrison County a home for himself and his family.

Those who may have missed their opportunity to greet Jones are certainly welcome to stop by his desk on the second floor of the Harrison County Court House. He's glad to meet new friends wherever they may be.

Sean Riley, Deputy Attorney General, was the guest speaker at the Champions for a Drug Free Harrison County community meeting Monday night. He gave an overview of new Kentucky heroin legislation.

Heroin

features of heroin legislation is the "Good Samaritan" provision which protects first responders — specifically police and EMTs — from liability when administering the heroin antidote, Naloxone, in an attempt to save a person from a heroin overdose.

The law also protects addicts from being arrested after reporting an overdose.

There have been documented cases where a person has died from an overdose because their peers feared being arrested if they called 911 to report the emergency, he said.

The legislation also contains provisions to increase the availability of Narcan in order to save lives, Riley said.

A provision favored by the Attorney General's office was a statute that would make traffickers open to murder charges if the heroin they sold could be connected to the death of a user.

"This provision was potentially toxic to the legislation package, so our office backed off it," Riley commented.

Nevertheless, as Riley stated from the beginning, the new legislation represents a solid first step toward addressing Kentucky's serious heroin problem.

In the meantime, the Attorney General's office is making proactive strides to award millions in grant money to help fund drug treatment and rehab programs.

One area that remains a problem in the cycle of addiction is joblessness among recovering addicts. Many of the people attending the presentation said that there are employment barriers for those recovering from addiction.

Many people commented that lacking the means to get a job and support themselves, addicts have no mechanism to escape their old life.

Riley agreed and commented that continuing the process of rehabilitation is something that Kentucky lawmakers may need to face in future legislative sessions.

Those who need information on addiction resources are encouraged to call the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services (SAMHSA) hotline at 1-800-662-4357 or visit the national website at www.samhsa.gov.

The thing that keeps you coming back

Becky Barnes
Editor

My husband Ernie calls it a shot that keeps you coming back. He's talking golf; a good drive or nice putt.

I'm talking about writing for a newspaper.

We all need validation, something to tell us we are headed in the right direction or even where the opportunities are.

It would be easy to throw down the proverbial putter, but then you get that one phone call that keeps you going.

Mine was a phone call from a local Vietnam veteran. He was touched by the words I had written in a story for the Honor Flight program, where veterans could have an expense-paid, one-day trip to Washington, D.C., to view the monuments to their service.

In that article, an Honor Flight representative talked about the plight of our Vietnam veterans who returned home from war to a country where people greeted them with spit rather than embraces.

After that story was published, I came into work to find a voice message on my phone.

The veteran started out by thanking me for the story. This man, who served our country overseas, who put his life not only on hold, but on the line, was praising my words.

His voice broke as he related his personal story about returning to the states and walking through the airport to a crowd of war protesters who spat on him, threw cups at him and jeered as he walked with his comrades.

He said he started to reach for one of the protesters after being spit on, but felt the hand of his superior officer on his shoulder.

"Young man, you don't need to be doing that," the officer told the soldier. "I can't blame you one bit, but he probably has more rights than you right now."

The officer put his arm around the young Cynthiana man, still so far away from home at the San Francisco Airport, and led him down the hall and away from the ugliness that no soldier asked for or should ever have to endure.

Where was the confetti and parade? Where was the "Thank you for your service?"

I was very young at the end of the Vietnam War, but not so young that I don't remember some of the nightly news clips on television.

It never occurred to me then that one soldier, who served valiantly, who had survived his tour of duty and was going home, was being put through another war in his own country.

I never saw the war from an individual's standpoint.

Thank you to this soldier. I'll keep his identity in my heart.

He said he served honorably as his daddy had taught him.

I believe that.

I also believe that every soldier, whether you agree with the reason for the war or not, deserves a thank you from those of us who never had to walk in their combat boots or slog through marshes and fight off not only the insects and sickness, but the enemy as well.

I wish I could do more for all our soldiers, but my gratitude will have to suffice.

Cedarbrook residents are scared and confused

To the editor:

My name is Danny Tolson of Cedarbrook Subdivision off U.S.27 south near the Harrison/Bourbon County line.

As you may already know, since we have been in the paper multiple times, we are facing another dilemma concerning our Waste Water Treatment Plant or sewer system due to several agencies not being on the same page.

None of them.

Not the The Kentucky Association of Counties (KACo), Kentucky Infrastructure Authority (KIA), Harrison County Sanitation District (HCSD), Public Service Commission (PSC), Office of the Kentucky Governor or the Harrison County Fiscal Court.

I'm not pointing any fingers here, but when one agency says one thing and another agency says something else, the Cedarbrook residents are left with nothing but confusion and fear.

All that I and my fellow Cedarbrook neighbors want is for something hopeful to happen. We would appreciate being addressed truthfully and honestly.

I know we have a step-by-step process to go through.

But then I see a recent letter sent from Mr. [Ron] Osborne of R.A.Williams to the PSC stating that he plans to terminate water and electric utility services unless an entity is identified to transfer the sewer plant too prior to the April 30 deadline.

We are all confused and scared about losing our homes.

The Licking Valley Singers are a blessing and treasure

To the editor:

As a new Cynthiana resident, I am looking for the "treasures" of Harrison County. Although my hunt has only just begun, I have found the Licking Valley Singers to be a real asset to this community.

Dave, my husband, and I moved here from Iowa not knowing anyone. We were invited to the Licking Valley Singers concert, "An American Tribute" last November. That concert was amazing. Afterwards a Licking Valley Singer member asked if I would like to sing with them for the next concert in April. That was a compliment to me.

At the first practice I found a room full of friendly and fascinating people who went out of their way to smile and welcome me to their group. Karen Bear, the gifted director, has a knack of making music practice fun.

I am blessed to be a member of the Licking Valley Singers and to have so many delightful new friends.

Come this Friday, April 26, at 7:30 p.m., or Sunday, April 28, at 2:30 p.m., to the Cynthiana Baptist Church for "Toppin' The Charts, Pop Classics of the 60s & 70s." You'll have a toe-tapping good time. Check out the advertising information in the Democrat, Face Book page and posters around town. I'll see you there.

Beauty and harmony

To the editor:

Take a symphony without the various instruments, there would not be a flow of music as each has a specific note to follow or there would be chaos.

An artist uses many colors to produce a masterpiece. Individually, the colors are beautiful. Individually they are bland, but when put together there is harmony.

How about a car? It doesn't function without a motor, a frame, wheels, etc. But, all together it runs smooth like it was made to do.

Birds sing in early morning and without their music it would not be enjoyable.

All trees - elm, oak, maple - would not be a pleasant sight if they were all the same.

You can take all animals and appreciate their individuality and without their differences they would not have beauty and harmony.

Look at man. If all were same height, weight, size, it would be bland.

Take time to enjoy the variances in life - protect and use life like it was created to do. Don't mess around and try to change everything.

Thank our creator for his wisdom so we can enjoy the beauty and harmony of everything he made.

Time to legalize industrial hemp

By Rep. Thomas Massie,
Guest Columnist

Of all the freedom-crushing laws and regulations issued from Washington, one of the most ridiculous is the decades-long federal ban on industrial hemp. For far too long, farmers and manufacturers in Kentucky and across the United States have been blocked from growing hemp or producing products from this versatile and useful plant. My colleagues and I in both the House and Senate hope to end this illogical ban. Therefore, in January of this year, I reintroduced H.R. 525, the "Industrial Hemp Farming Act," which would stop the federal government's hemp blockade.

First, however, it is important to remember that the fight for hemp freedom is entirely unrelated to the issue of marijuana legalization. The scare tactics and false rhetoric used by those who want to keep industrial hemp out of Kentucky are not based on facts. As the Congressional Research Service (CRS) reports, hemp and marijuana plants are distinct from one another. Although they both descend from the same species of plant, their chemical makeup is different, as is their physical appearance. Importantly, hemp has too low a THC (delta-9 tetrahydrocannabinol, marijuana's primary psychoactive chemical) content to have any intoxicating effect.

Unfortunately, false information about hemp causes more than just confusion—it results in the export of valuable U.S. jobs to foreign countries. According to CRS, "[s]ome estimate that the global market for hemp consists of more than 25,000 products in nine submarkets: agriculture; textiles; recycling; automotive; furniture; food/nutrition/beverages; paper; construction materials; and personal care." And while the United States does not produce hemp, other industrialized nations do. Specifically, China is one of the largest producers and exporters of hemp products in the world, and we import hemp from China.

Likewise, Canada also supplies hemp to the United States. Canadian hemp production soared following its legalization in the 1990s after a sixty-year prohibition. There are now an estimated 100 Canadian hemp farms. Why not bring this industry to Kentucky?

In fact, a 1998 study conducted by the University of Kentucky's Center for Business and Economic Research estimated that "[t]he total economic impact in Kentucky, assuming one industrial hemp processing facility locating in Kentucky and selling certified seed to other growers, would be 303 full-time equivalent jobs and $6,700,000 in worker earnings." The study further concluded that "[i]f two processing facilities were established in Kentucky, industrial hemp would have an economic impact of 537 fulltime equivalent jobs and $12,100,000 in worker earnings," and "[i]f one processing facility and one industrial hemp paper-pulp plant were established in Kentucky, industrial hemp would have an economic impact of 771 full-time equivalent jobs and $17,600,000 in worker earnings."

Historically, hemp was grown for hundreds of years throughout the United States, and particularly in Kentucky. Even the sails on the ship that transported Christopher Columbus to the New World were made of hemp. From colonial days through the mid-1800s, Kentucky was the primary hemp producer in the United States. During World War II, hemp production assisted with the war effort. Even Henry Ford, the founder of Ford Motor Company and the "Father of the Modern Assembly Line," used hemp in his automobile parts.

During the 113th Congress, I achieved a major legislative victory when an amendment I co-sponsored to H.R. 1947, the "Federal Agriculture Reform and Risk Management Act of 2013" (the FARRM bill), passed the House of Representatives. This amendment allows colleges, universities, and State departments of agriculture to grow and cultivate industrial hemp for academic and agricultural research purposes in states where it is already legal. My amendment was included in the final version of the bill, which passed both the House and Senate and was signed into law by the President. Since then, numerous pilot projects have successfully launched throughout Kentucky.

While this was a tremendous victory, my goal is to change the law even further so that hemp can be grown and used for more than simply academic and research purposes. That is why I reintroduced the Industrial Hemp Farming Act (H.R. 525) in January of this year. My bill changes the federal definition of marijuana to exclude industrial hemp, and would therefore prevent federal government interference with a state that chooses to produce hemp.

H.R. 525 has 54 co-sponsors, including Kentucky Reps. Andy Barr, Ed Whitfield, and John Yarmuth. Sen. Ron Wyden introduced a Senate companion bill, co-sponsored by Majority Leader Mitch McConnell and Sen. Rand Paul. The momentum behind industrial hemp freedom continues to grow, not only at the federal level, but also at the state level. To date, twenty-one states (including Kentucky) have legalized hemp.

I am hopeful that as more citizens in Kentucky and throughout the nation learn about the economic benefits of hemp, its job-creating potential, and its place in our nation's history, H.R. 525 will pass both the House and Senate and become law.

Public Safety Professional award is surprise to fire chief

By Josh Shepherd, News writer

Cynthiana Fire Chief Jay Sanders has spent years, decades even, working with fellow members of the city fire department. He didn't think it was possible they could keep a secret, especially from him.

In February though, his crew, along with Cynthiana Mayor James Smith, had what Sanders described as these "suspicious Cheshire cat smiles" when they told him he needed to be at the Cynthiana Christian Church on a Monday night.

It was only then that he discovered he'd been named "Public Safety Professional of the Year" by the Cynthiana-Harrison County Chamber of Commerce.

"I was like 'What?!'" Sanders said.

His surprise at receiving the honor was matched by the fact that he'd had no clue at all about what his crew had planned.

"They were all in on it. Even the mayor and he's a preacher," Sanders exclaimed.

But this is the kind of thing you expect from family, Sanders said, which is really the only suitable way to describe the relationship he has with the fire department since he joined about two decades ago.

Cynthiana Fire Department Chief Jay Sanders stands beneath a plaque commemorating the proud history of volunteer and professional firefighters in our community.

In part, it's because the nature of the work of first responders requires that members trust and love one another. There are days when their lives may depend on that trust, he said.

But that bond is also formed because the nature of being a public servant can mean working on some unusual jobs, Sanders said.

At the mention of unusual jobs, Charles Carson appeared in the lounge doorway and became a perfect illustration of Sanders' point.

"The first time Carson and I worked together, we were rescuing a calf that had got itself out in the river. The farmer was an older fellow and he was trying to rig something to drag the calf to shore. If he'd been successful, he'd have been pulled into the water," Sanders recalled.

Working for a small community fire department, it can be responding to a house or building fire, extricating people from vehicles or figuring out the best method for a livestock water rescue, Sanders said.

He never wanted to have it any other way.

Sanders has been a public servant since the day he graduated high school. With the exception of a seven-year stint as a member of the emergency response personnel at Toyota Motor Manufacturing, Sanders' entire professional career has been in public service.

"Toyota provided me experience with emergency situations unique to the car manufacturing industry. They also paid my expenses to go to Texas A&M to get firefighter certification and EMT certification, so I appreciate all my years there. It was great training and experience.

"But I was grateful that an opportunity opened up to join the Cynthiana department and basically let me work at home," Sanders said.

He came up through the ranks, he said. After joining, he earned the rank of lieutenant, then shared the job of assistant chief with Carson and Robbie Lyons before being named chief of the department.

One important thing he's learned as fire chief is that there is no trouble at all motivating a crew of fire fighters.

"A crew of 18 alpha personalities takes a lot to manage. They crave situations where they can act and make decisions quickly," Sanders said. "That is the type of personality that fire and rescue work attracts."

His job is to make sure that his crew gets all the proper training so that, in emergency situations, they understand the risks of a given situation and to take all necessary precautions to stay safe.

"The urge to take action and help can, at times, compound the risks to a crew," Sanders said.

It is as important that his crew stays safe and returns to their family as it is to render help and aid to folks in an emergency situation.

"It all goes back to the fact that we're all part of this big extended family," he said.

During shifts, it's not unusual for families to eat dinner together at the station. Holidays get celebrated together.

"We watch kids grow up, we see relationships come and go. We laugh and cry and love together," Sanders said.

And it's more than just relationships among the present crew, he said. The bond among firefighters is just as strong down the generations as well.

"This department has so much history to it. Most of what I know about leadership from generations of former chiefs and assistant chiefs like [Terry] Stinson, [Mike] Sosbe and [Mike] Gibson," Sanders commented.

The satisfaction comes from knowing that from their work, the community is a safer and better place to live.

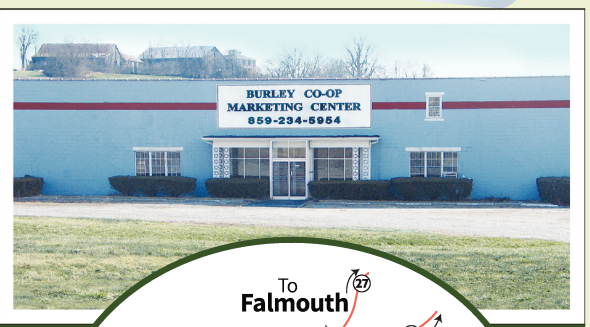

Editor's note: Since the interview with Sanders, he reported to the city commission that the fire department has improved its ISO rating from 5 to 4.

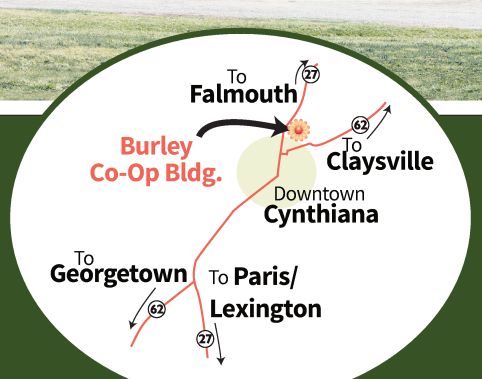

The ISO rating is a measure of a community's safety preparedness based on the resources local fire and emergency response departments. Improvements in a community ISO rating should have a net effect of reducing homeowner insurance rates, Sanders commented.

We Don't Miss The Water Until The Well Runs Dry

Kenneth Newby
Guest Columnist

Ebenezer United Methodist Church

Isn't it amazing how we take things for granted in our life from day to day, not realizing that there must be a reason why everything seems to be going well.

You find yourself getting more and more comfortable with how good life can be and suddenly you begin to witness a change in your life. You are having family issues, financial problems and even issues on the job.

The more you try to make things right, the more there seems to be an issue. So, I ask myself, "What am I not doing now that I was doing then that could make a difference and help me to get my life back in order."

I know that God works in mysterious ways. We just don't understand them.

We know that God is GOOD all the time.

When life seems to be going well and in perspective, we need to remember that God is in the midst of us. I don't want you to think that every day is going to be a holiday because there will always be storms in life.

If you can just hold on to God's unchanging hand and anchor yourself in the bedrock of Jesus, The Lord Will Make a Way Some How.

Now get back to what I was doing when things where seemingly going well in my life.

The answer is:

I was attending church regularly and I was praying to acknowledge God for all that he has done during the good times and the bad times. When we are serving the Lord, we can't just serve him only when things are bad. We must serve him every day, all day. God is not a part-time God, he is full time, and always on time.

I was one who had taken God's gifts for granted and used him to my advantage by not continuously serving him the way that I should. Then one day when I got myself together to serve a God who loves me in spite of my faults; who sits high, looks low; and is able to do all things.

A God who picked me up and turned me around, planted my feet on solid ground,

He gave me another chance. He didn't have to do it, but He done it any way.

When we find ourselves serving the world, being selfish, forgetting who we are and from where we came, remember that it was God who woke us up this morning and protected us while we slept.

The world has so much to offer but God has more. So when there's doubt in our minds about the condition of the road that we have to travel — to run the race of endurance; Hebrews 12:1-2 says, "Therefore, since we are surrounded by such a huge crowd of witnesses to the life of faith, let us strip off every weight that slows us down, especially the sin that so easily hinders our progress. And let us run with endurance the race that God has set before us. We do this by keeping our eyes on Jesus, on whom our faith depends from start to finish."

Now I can truly say that "People Need The Lord" and the only way to serve him is to serve him faithfully until the day we die.

Death of the dreaded neighbor lady

Nancy Kennedy
Columnist

Grace Notes

I killed my neighbor lady last week.

I've written about her before, about how she's a huge buttinsky when it comes to my kids and how she's always running interference for them, "protecting" them from the way I parent them and just basically being a major pain in my neck.

Actually, this stick-her-fingers-where-they-don't-belong neighbor lady is really me, and the parent is God, according to a story I wrote in my book, "Girl On A Swing." It's in the chapter titled "Eternal Umbilicus," which refers to all the ways I've tried to reattach the umbilical cord.

The neighbor lady story is a parable God told me one day when I was particularly being an overbearing, intrusive mom, although I don't remember what I was doing that day. Probably snooping or giving unsolicited advice or fretting over whether or not they remembered to floss or throw out food past the expiration date.

The details don't matter as much as the message of the parable: God can handle the details of their lives. Besides, even if they don't floss or they eat old food, they are adults and the resulting consequences will help build their character. Also, constant mommy interference only produces mommy dependent adults.

(I just had a mental picture of 5-foot, 1-inch me carrying a 5-foot, 6-inch daughter on my hip. I don't know whether to laugh or cry.)

Anyway, God has told me this parable often over the years, sometimes hourly. Even though my kids are adults, I still think they're 12 and treat them like they're 10.

I may have a screw loose somewhere, but I think it's just that moms don't like to see their kids sad or in trouble or struggling, and we think it's loving to swoop in and try to fix their problems and put back together their broken hearts, but often it's more loving not to. It's more loving to trust God to do it, since he does it better anyway, being God and all.

So, in case you haven't picked up on this during the past six or so months, I have one daughter who has been having a rough time, putting me into turbo-charged neighbor lady mode. I won't tell you all that I've done to try to fix things for her except to say I've pulled out all the stops, used every trick in my play book and have done just about everything I knew God didn't want me to do.

Last week, I finally ran out of steam. That's when I killed the neighbor lady.

I had gone to my church on a Monday afternoon and sat in the quiet, darkened sanctuary, just me and God, crying until I was exhausted. I poured out my heartache and heartbreak, confessed all the ways I tried to get in God's way of dealing with my daughter, all the times I didn't trust him because I thought I could do things better.

I finally gave up. I gave in. I came to the end of myself and found him there, wrapping his arms around me, letting me know that all is forgiven and that he's working all things together for good, even all my neighbor lady shenanigans.

When I walked out of the church, I felt like I had truly killed the neighbor lady, and so far she's pretty much stayed dead, although at times I hear her trying to claw her way out of her coffin. So, maybe she's not truly dead, but maybe deadish. Seriously wounded, at least.

Oddly, right after the neighbor lady's quasi-death, things started turning around for my daughter. It might be a coincidence. Or maybe God waited for me to see what he could do without my "help."

As for me, I've slept better most night. I can concentrate better at work. My mind isn't spinning, trying to connive and plot and plan ways to make my daughters' lives pain- and trouble-free.

Well, maybe just a little, but a lot less than it was. Two steps forward, one step back, but moving forward.

For years, God has been telling me he's got this, that he can handle my kids' lives. After 30-plus years, I think I'm finally starting to believe him.

Denton and Sgt. Eric Kendall.

In his grievance, Johnson alleged that Tapp came into the meeting and stripped him of his duties, told him he would not be attending any more meetings and took away his cruiser. Scheduling was also turned over to Kendall.

Thomas also alleged that Tapp's actions in dispensing 29 guns, 16 seized in a criminal investigation and 13 city-owned, was a violation of the law.

Thomas said Tapp ignored Johnson's guidance in dispensing the firearms and nearly 4,000 rounds of ammunition.

On Jan. 9, the commission met in a special meeting to reinstate Johnson as chief, return his cruiser and re-establish the chain of command.

The seriousness [of the allegations] is sufficient to show that Tapp should not have that job, Thomas claimed.

At the conclusion of Thomas' opening remarks, Fuller took the podium to counter Thomas' assertions and lay claims against Johnson.

Fuller first cited the Southern Police Institute's (SPI) report that detailed 160 points that needed to be addressed.

He said some were redundant and narrowed the scope to about 140 points.

Fuller said he asked the assistant chief to go through the 140 SPI recommendations and mark those that had been addressed.

"'No' is all over this," Fuller said, indicating the sheets containing the recommendations.

"Some officers haven't been evaluated for two years or more," Fuller said, adding that evaluations in a police personnel file are very important as evidenced in the recent police action in Oklahoma.

As for the guns, Fuller maintained that Johnson knew what was going on with the guns because he had signed an activity sheet from Denton that detailed his pursuit of quotes for their sale.

"What Commissioner Tapp wanted to do was implement what was recommended to do and was within his powers," Fuller said.

He added that the complaint filed by the chief was done on Jan. 5. On Jan. 6, he said, the chief authorized the release of an impounded vehicle from Rick's Auto.

Fuller said the vehicle was being held for no insurance and expired tags, but that the chief went to Rick's and said to release the vehicle, despite it having an expired license.

Fuller also exhibited the chief's activity sheets between Jan. 1, 2013, and Feb. 10, 2014, showing that he had only one arrest during that time frame.

"He was not doing rounds or anything on the street," Fuller said.

At the conclusion of the opening remarks, Thomas called Johnson to the podium to testify regarding his grievance.

He stood for nearly two hours while Fuller and Thomas questioned his actions and work history.

With regard to the Jan. 2 command staff meeting, Johnson said Tapp told him that his responses to two questions would determine the rest of the meeting.

He said the two questions were about Tapp's longevity pay and how that was handled and how Jenny Alcorn was hired as a 911 supervisor.

"I guess my answers were not what he wanted to hear," Johnson said, adding that was when he was informed that his cruiser would be marked with police decals and that a cage would be added.

Johnson said the decals were already on hand. However, he said a cage was not budgeted.

The chief was given an older model Jeep Cherokee to drive and he was advised that he would be working the second and third shift in one week.

Johnson said he was told he would not be attending meetings where he previously served as city representative.

As for the surplus weapons, Johnson contended that he explained to Tapp that the weapons could not be sold until those seized had been released from the courts and that some of those would have to be turned over to the Kentucky State Police.

The order from Judge Jay Delaney was not received until March 2015, Thomas said.

Thomas asked Johnson what happened to the guns.

He responded that they were picked up by a Kiesler Police Supply representative on Jan. 8 or 9.

The guns were not approved as surplus by the Cynthiana City Commission until the last meeting on April 14.

Johnson said he explained the procedure for getting rid of surplus weapons and related the recent trouble of a police chief in another city for allegedly not disposing of weapons in the proper manner.

Johnson also noted that he could retire, but decided to remain with the department.

"I decided I was not going to let someone run me away from something I love doing," he said.

The chief added that he would not be able to carry out his duties as chief as defined in the city's job description working on a second or third shift.

He said Tapp had stripped him of his duties by giving decision-making powers to Denton.

Johnson said that things in the department were rocky, but that they had recently improved.

Johnson described the working conditions as being stressful and responded to Thomas' question that he did believe he was in a hostile work environment.

Fuller also questioned the chief about his approval of Denton's time sheet that indicated he was seeking bids for the guns in October.

Johnson responded that, yes, he was seeking quotes, but there had been no approval for their sale at that point.

The testimony was then directed to the release of an unlicensed vehicle on Johnson's approval.

Johnson explained that the woman showed proof of insurance and said she was going to get her license tags renewed immediately.

The charges against the woman for no insurance and expired tags were later dismissed, Johnson said.

Fuller asked the chief about programs that had been initiated since Tapp took office.

Johnson said the recognition for officers was Tapp's project.

He also agreed that a return of "community policing" that was started under Chief Bob Barkley, was reinstated.

Lair and Mayor James Smith had to redirect questioning more than once on the basis of relevancy to the grievance.

After over two hours of Johnson's testimony, Tapp was called for questioning.

Tapp advised that he was not the lead in the grievance filed against the chief last year.

"I was a participant, but I did not lead," he said, noting that he signed the grievance because he felt its content was true.

Thomas said that following the 12-hour hearing on the first grievance, there was no evidence to support the allegations against the chief.

He said the officers wanted Johnson removed as the chief and Denton assigned those duties.

Tapp agreed that he was not happy about the outcome of the hearing.

"I was not happy with those findings because I didn't like the direction of the department," Tapp said.

The commissioner acknowledged that he had run for office with one of his goals to remove Johnson as chief of police.

"That was not my sole goal," Tapp said, noting that he believed Johnson needed to get to know the men in the department better. "The best way to do that is to work with them."

There was also some loud discussion about the dispensing of the chief's cruiser.

Tapp contended that he had the cage added for the chief's safety. He said the chief could not transport prisoners without a cage.

However, Thomas said the chief's car was not one that had to be marked because it was used as an administrative vehicle.

"When you reassigned the chief to second and third shift, that would violate the chief's duties as chief," Thomas claimed.

"No, it would not," countered the commissioner. He also noted that as a salaried employee, the chief would have daytime hours to complete his chief duties.

Thomas asked Tapp if he believed he had absolute authority.

"No, I do not," Tapp responded. " What I did, I did for the betterment of the city."

"You don't think that what you did was wrong?" asked Thomas.

"No sir." said Tapp.

"You don't feel like you violated this man?" Thomas continued.

"No, I do not," Tapp said.

Thomas had more questions about the 29 guns. He said the guns were turned over to Kiesler and a credit of $7,967 was opened for the police department before the guns were even declared as surplus.

Thomas continued that at the last commission meeting, when Tapp presented the request to declare them as surplus, Tapp said 'we have some old weapons at the police department.' However, the weapons were not at the police department, they were at Kiesler, Thomas said.

Tapp responded that physically the weapons were at Kiesler. However, he felt they were secure there and that they were technically, police department property.

Thomas said Commissioner Mark Mattmiller specifically asked if the guns would be carried to Kiesler and Tapp responded that they would.

"You could have corrected then and said 'I made a mistake they are already there,'" advised Mattmiller.

"I took that as a figure of speech. We had not signed off on any deal with Kiesler," Tapp explained.

After about seven hours, the commission went into the deliberation phase to discuss testimony and decide how to proceed.

Mayor Smith asked Johnson if the commissioner's Jan. 9 actions reinstating the chief's duties had addressed the grievance.

Mattmiller added, "Addressed or satisfied? Addressed, yes; satisfied, no."

"I agree. If it had satisfied it, we wouldn't be here today," said Commissioner Roger Slade.

Mattmiller said he believed the chief had been treated with aggression and very little diplomacy.

"I believe the grievance is valid," Mattmiller added.

Smith said the commission needed to address the situation as a team and that teams have to have trust in one another.

"That trust has been broken; some feel lied to by you Commissioner Tapp," said Mayor Smith. "Until we address trust, we can't move forward."

Tapp said he did not intentionally lie.

Smith said that some of the police officers he talked with, who had supported Tapp during his election, were no longer supporting him.

Mattmiller described the gun issue as "wheels within wheels, almost like a cover up."

Smith said the commission had two options: to see if Tapp and Johnson could work out their differences and bring the department and officers back to a high morale, or move Tapp to another department.

In the end, the commission decided to question Tapp and Johnson individually and report at the next meeting for possible action.

Teater to host May Omega meeting

The Omega chapter of Beta Sigma Phi met at the home of Lois Judy on Monday, April 6. Eleven members answered roll call by telling Easter traditions started in childhood and carried on through their families.

Guest for the evening was Marley Judy, who was visiting with the hostess.

The social committee gave plans for the group to go to the local play "Romeo and Juliet" in May, with dinner included. Plans will be finalized at the May meeting.

Service committee completed plans for serving lunch at Clifton Village on April 18. Also, the Judy Mitchell Letcher scholarship applications are available for graduating high school senior girls. New guidelines will be voted on to define what constitutes perfect attendance at the May meeting.

An invitation from Gamma Chi chapter for Honors night was extended to Omega. This will be on April 27 at the Cynthiana Christian Church. Each chapter will announce their girl of the year, program of the year, and perfect attendance.

Barbara Snopek gave the program for the evening on the Beta Sigma Phi family in Cynthiana. She pointed out that we are a diverse group, coming from all over the U.S. One chapter has now become four. She gave a list of all BSP members, both past and present. Snopek also had a quiz with facts about the members that we might not all know. It was fun finding out new things about each one.

Judy Judy, vice president, led the meeting and announced that the May meeting would be at the home of Bonnie Teater.

Installation of officers and revealing of secret sisters would be the program for the evening.

Pruning spring flowering shrubs

Jeneen Wiche
Columnist
www.SwallowRailFarm.com

June 1 is the official cut off that marks the difference between a spring bloomer and a summer bloomer. Does it matter that you know? Yes, if you want to properly prune because pruning after June 1 could result in no blooms next year.

This spring was a great one for spring bloomers: lilacs, viburnums, azaleas, rhododendrons and many others were all able to do their thing without a major frost or freeze here at the farm.

Many of our favorite spring bloomers, however, invariably grow out of control so the question arises, "when is the best time to prune?"

If you want to maintain your spring blooms then pruning spring bloomers right after their blooms fade is the goal.

The rule of thumb that gardeners live by when it comes to pruning blooming shrubs: if it blooms before June 1 it blooms on buds set last year; if it blooms after June 1 it blooms on new growth from the current season.

Most spring flowering shrubs will have set all their buds for next year by this July.

Even if your shrub is still in good form a little pruning each year is not a bad idea because the pruning cuts stimulate new vigorous growth which keeps everyone looking good without a major overhaul.

If you have ever tried to tackle an old lilac or viburnum you will appreciate the wisdom here; over grown shrubs can be difficult to prune if they have gone too long without attention.

When pruning, set a goal that includes reducing size, thinning, and removing the oldest, dead or pest-damaged wood.

Another rule of thumb is that we should only remove about 1/3 of a shrub at a time. All this pruning will encourage new, vigorous growth and will improve the overall appearance and health of an old shrub.

Summer blooming shrubs like Spirea and Weigelia can still be pruned, as well, although it is best to get this done in early spring.

Pruning now will delay your summer bloom a little but the act of pruning will encourage new growth and bloom.

Evergreens like boxwood, Taxus and holly are best pruned after the threat of frost has passed in spring so you can still tackle the chore now to reduce size and thin the shrubs.

These evergreens will put out vigorous new growth after pruning so don't be afraid to do some hard pruning on these if major rejuvenation is needed.

Your next opportunity to thin and prune these evergreens is in late summer, early enough for the new growth (that is always stimulated after making a pruning cut) to harden off before first frost.

While the recommendation for fertilizing woody plants is to do so in the fall of the year, spring bloomers and evergreens benefit from a little fertilization in the spring as they push new growth, bloom and set buds.

Most of these plants like a lower soil pH, as well, so some composted manure with a layer of pine straw mulch or a light application of a fertilizer formulated for acid-loving plants will help to maintain an agreeable soil pH.

There are some new sea-based fertilizers for acid-loving plants that are formulated from lobster shell and seaweed, for example, if you are looking for an organic alternative.

Home runs and walks key to Breds beating of Pendleton County

By Mike Aldridge, Sports writer

Zach Day and Robbie Stroub hit home runs and Pendleton County pitching walked four and hit three others as the Breds rebounded from a two-game losing streak to beat Pendleton County 12-2 Tuesday.

The six-inning game saw Harrison County break out of its hitting doldrums scoring 12 times on nine hits.

The game was scoreless until the bottom of the third when shortstop Brett Persinger singled with one out.

After Robbie Stroub struck out, Luke Slucher lifted a high fly ball to center field, which was dropped by Robbie Gaskins for an error.

This brought to bat Gus Garrison with runners on first and third. Slucher stole second followed by a smash base hit up the middle by Garrison that scored two runs.

Day's home run to right field in the fourth made the score 3-0 with only three innings left in regulation play.

Harrison County then sent nine batters to the plate in the fifth picking up five runs on four base hits and two Wildcat errors.

Persinger led off with a bunt single followed by Stroub's home run to dead center field.

After Slucher flied out for the first out, the Pendleton County third baseman made an error on the next two balls to put runners at first and second.

Day doubled, scoring Garrison. Pinch hitter Ryan Smiley singled in Mitchell and Day to make the score 8-0 after five innings.

Sophomore Nathan Fryman, after a brief struggle in the first inning, mowed the Wildcats down through five innings, allowing only one base hit, walking one and striking out four.

In the sixth, with one out, Wildcat second baseman Kenton Hornback reached on an error by Persinger at short.

Mack Ramsey struck out for the second out, but Fryman walked Pendleton County pitcher Hunter Lea to put runners on first and second with two outs.

Fryman then balked, allowing both runners to advance.

Third baseman Jonah Smith then sent a high fly ball into center field which Noah

Tennis Fillies 3rd, Breds 4th in Quad Meet on the Hilltop

By Mike Aldridge, Sports writer

Campbell County ran away with the girls' competition and George Rogers Clark edged the Camels in the boys' in the Quad tennis meet Saturday on the Hilltop courts.

The boys' competition saw the Breds with only doubles competitors where they won one of five matches.

The Luke Bradford/ Boston Pergram duo won the consolation match over a Montgomery County pair before dropping their final match to Brann/Smith, also of Montgomery County. Isiah Stiltner and Tyler Williams also competed as a doubles pair. They lost to a pair from Campbell County as well as the Brann/Smith duo.

The Fillies' Alexis Lanza won her opening singles match over Fulks of GRC before falling 6-2, 6-2 to Crigler of Campbell County.

Grace Roberts also competed in the singles falling to the second seeded Covington of Montgomery County.

The doubles competition saw the duos of Emmalee Lutes/Cordelia Schlanstein and Alycia Schaum/Sara Ledford both lose their opening matches. However, Lutes/Schlanstein won the consolation match 8-1 over a duo from Montgomery County.

Freshman Melony Dunaway replaced Lutes for the fourth place match which she and Schlanstein won over another Montgomery County pair.

The tennis team is scheduled to battle Ft. Thomas Highlands on the road Wednesday. They also travel Friday to face Montgomery County.

Fillies use big second inning to defeat Paris 6-3 on Shirley Field

By Mike Aldridge, Sports writer

The Harrison County Fillies improved their season record to 10-4 Tuesday with a 6-3 win over the Paris Lady Hounds.

Harrison County scored an unearned run in the first on a Macy Martin single that scored Courtney Newsom for an early 1-0 advantage.

Newsom had reached base with two outs on an error by the Paris shortstop.

Harrison County took what seemed to be a safe lead in the second sending 11 batters to the plate and scoring five times. The Fillies did all of this with only three base hits.

Paris' pitching walked three batters and hit another to aid the Fillies' cause. The Lady Hounds also committed a costly error which kept the Harrison County inning alive.

Fillies' starter Bailey Conley was sailing along giving up only one hit through five innings holding the 6-0 lead.

The sixth inning saw the visitors start to hit the ball for hits and the Fillies' fielding become suspect.

The lead-off batter singled and advanced to second on an error in left field.

The next batter singled and drove in the first Paris run and then stole second.

A fly out to second brought the inning's first out but the next batter singled, putting runners on first and third. A hit batter loaded the bases and errors by the second baseman and center fielder on the next play scored the second run.

The next Lady Hound batter singled to score a third run but a ground out to third ended the threat.

After the Fillies went down in order in the bottom of the sixth, Conley survived a two-out error and another Paris base hit to shut down the Lady Hounds for the win.

Harrison County scratched out only four base hits for the night and reached base on three Paris walks and two hit batters. Paris committed two errors.

Paris picked up six base hits, drew one walk and had two batters hit

Kearstin Tingle was fourth in the 100M hurdles.

The 800M relay team of Lail, Martin, Bolin and Summer Franklin also brought home a fourth place finish. The same four runners were fifth in the 400M relay race.

The girls' division of the meet was won by Boyle County with 115 points followed by Scott County with 83.

The Fillies were third followed by Franklin County, Western Hills, Woodford County, Danville, Anderson County, Burgin and Kentucky School for the Deaf.

Playing for pay: Why not make two divisions again?

Mike Aldridge
Sports Writer

Reading the information about the five "power" conferences' decision to pay their scholarship athletes made me think of how it used to be.

This is not to be confused with the current movement to pay players in college, but instead a decision to add to the scholarship benefits.

According to the article I read, other scholarship students who are not on athletic scholarships already receive additional money that they can use as they see fit. This is in addition to room and board, books, fees and supplies.

The money can be used for anything the scholarship recipient desires.

Now in the ACC, Big 10, SEC, Big 12, and Pac-12, the athletic scholarship people will receive this extra money.

The amount of money each athlete receives is based on the cost of attending the institution and will be more at some schools than others.

There will be differences with schools inside the same conference with some of the football powers in the SEC paying almost $2,000 more per athlete than some of the other "football" schools.

It is already an arguing point and it hasn't been fully implemented yet.

This decision puts the Eastern and Western Kentucky schools and their ilk at an even greater disadvantage than they already are battling.

If Eastern's new athletic director, Steve Lochmueller, has plans to move the Colonels up to the big division in football and remain there in basketball, his school already has a great recruiting disadvantage. So why not do it like the NCAA used to when I was much younger.

In those days there were the college division and the university division and they did not compete for the same trophies.

Schools such as Evansville College and Kentucky Wesleyan were in the college division and were always threats to win it all.

Players like King Kelly Coleman, Ed Smallwood, Earl "The Pearl" Monroe, Walt Frazier and Jerry Sloan came from the college division.

Even the great coach Phil Jackson played in the college division tournament for South Dakota State.

The difference now would be that these schools would be in with the Ivy League, Missouri Valley, Sun Belt and other of the non "power" conferences and also include all sports not just basketball.

There could be a championship just like the university division and I bet there would be major network television coverage like the big tournament too.

Let the five "power" conferences continue to dictate to the NCAA and soon there would be no need for 68 teams, but they could cut back to 32 or 24 if they wanted a quality tournament.

The recruiting advantage is huge already in favor of the five power conferences and letting them dole out additional benefits is making it insurmountable.

This is assuming that players from the power conferences do not already get additional benefits, which many of us think happens on a regular basis.

This new idea, while great for the students in the power conferences, is making a big problem for the non-power conference schools.

There has to be a better way.

Wrestling banquet, awards ceremony held Sunday at County Extension Office

By Mike Aldridge, Sports writer

Coach Luke Tucker and the Harrison County High School wrestling team held their season-ending banquet and awards ceremony Sunday in the Extension Office.

The awards for 19 different categories were presented by Tucker, Terry Box and the wrestling assistants.

Box was on hand to present the Larkie Box Extra Effort Award to junior Colin Coy. This award is named for Box's father, Larkie, who was a wrestling fan and a proponent of giving the most each time on the mat.

Michael Mattox was given the Coach Russ Riegel Award, which goes to the most outstanding wrestler for the season. Mattox also earned the award for the most take downs and for most escapes and reversals.

Kellon Williams won the Most Outstanding State Tournament award. Clay Arthur took home the awards for the most pins and also received the captain's award.

Two wrestlers received the awards for Most Hard-Nosed, Most Potential and Rookie of the Year. Colby Adams and Malcolm Walker were the Rookies of the Year, the Hudgins brothers, Brent and Tyler, were named as having the Most Potential, and Seniors Noah Mitchell and Mark Taylor were deemed the most Hard-Nosed wrestlers.

Colton Mott won the senior award while fellow seniors Oakie Barnes and Sean Mullikin were awarded the Super Sub and Most Improved awards respectfully.

Chase Highlander won the Best Rider award while Austin Harless won the Biggest Heart award and Nathan Lopez was named to the Ironman award.

"This was a good year as we were second in the small school state duals and second in our region," said Tucker. "We will really miss the seniors next year but we do have a good group coming back. Factor in the good eighth grade class that is coming into the high school and we should have another very good year next year."

Fillies basketball holds year-end banquet

By Mike Aldridge, Sports writer

The Harrison County Fillies were feted at the year-end banquet held last Wednesday evening.

Coach Kim Furnish and her assistant coaches spoke of the good year with the district championship and some of the players' individual accomplishments.

Furnish was quick to praise her three departing seniors. The seniors are Kelsey Roberts, Whitney Gray and Chelsea Ingram. Gray and Roberts have been in the Fillies program from 2010 through 2015 while Ingram has a year on them beginning in 2009.

Roberts plans to attend Northern Kentucky University and major in criminal justice.

"Kelsey was a great mentor to her teammates especially her younger sister, Kali," noted Furnish.

Ingram, who is 17th all-time in Fillies' scoring with 865 points, plans to attend UK and go into the pharmacy school.

"Chelsea combined great academics with being a two-sport athlete," said Furnish. "She balanced her time well and made a big contribution to the Fillies."

Gray, like the others, has her career path all planned out. She is attending Western Kentucky University on a full scholarship and plans to be a roller coaster engineer.

"Whitney is a tremendously gifted student with a big heart," said Furnish. "She improved so much during the year and was a steady performer who made big plays when we needed them."

The awards were given for several categories by the coaching staff.

All Region player junior Madison Philpot made the most two-point field goals and had the highest per game scoring average with 10.9 ppg.

Gray had the best free throw percentage with 75 percent and Ingram made the most three pointers with 42. Sophomore Taylor Reffett had the most blocks with 35 and was the team's leading rebounder, grabbing 216 total for the season.

Eighth grader Madison Kellione was the leader in steals and assists with 55 in each category.

Three Most Improved Player Awards were given; one per team. The freshman team winner was Kaylee Clements, the JV winner was Kali Roberts and the varsity winner was Kelsey Roberts.

Junior Kayla Ford was the sixth Man of the Year as well as the Most Dependable player.

JV Player of the Year was Emma Darnell while the Freshman Player of the Year was Christy Adams.

Katelin Ecklar was the Rookie of the Year.

Other awards were given to Meghan Clem for being the Work Horse, Haley Creech for Most Relentless, Sylvonya Williams for Best Team Player, and Morgan Owsley for Most Perseverance. Madelynn Denniston was named the Most Coachable.

Academic First Team All State members were Philpot, Gray and Ingram. Ford and Clem were Honorable Mention Academic All State.

Others receiving Academic Awards were Haley Creech, Hannah Creech, Adams, Owsley, Reffett and Darnell.

Breds

Mitchell was under, ready to catch when he lost his footing letting the ball fall to the ground. The two runners scored to make the score 8-2.

Pendleton County brought in sophomore Logan Fugate to pitch the sixth inning and he never recorded an out.

Beginning with Persinger, Fugate walked four straight batters and then hit three in a row to force in three runs before throwing a wild pitch that allowed Garrison to score run number 12 for the final 12-2 score.

Day, Stroub and Persinger each had two hits to lead the Thorobreds while Persinger made three outstanding fielding plays from his shortstop position.

The win gives the Breds a 14-3 record while the loss drops Pendleton County to 5-6.

The Breds will face Fleming County Thursday night in a varsity/JV doubleheader that begins at 6 p.m.

Friday and Saturday Harrison County will host the HMH/McDonald's Classic on the Hilltop with the Breds facing East Jessamine at 7:30 p.m.

The Fillies' Monday game scheduled with Pendleton County was rained out and rescheduled as a double header on Monday, May 4.

The next Fillies action will be Thursday when they travel to Fleming County for a 6 p.m. match up.

Breds edge Paris, drop games at home to Eastern and Fleming Co.

By Mike Aldridge, Sports writer

The Harrison County Thorobreds appear to have hit a mid-season batting slump as they totaled only five hits in each of the last three games winning one and losing two.

Last Wednesday, the Breds played host to Paris winning a nip-and-tuck battle 4-3.

The Greyhounds led on two separate occasions before Harrison County rallied in the fifth for two runs and the win.

Paris took the early lead scoring one run in both the first and second innings. Harrison County scored in the bottom of the second on a walk to Zach Day, a single by Conner Free and then a two-out RBI single by C.J. Claypool.

Harrison County tied the game at two runs each in the third without getting a base hit.

Brandon Case walked, stole second, went to third on a passed ball and scored on Robbie Stroub's ground out to short.

Paris regained the lead in the fourth on a double, a single and a fielder's choice to make the score 3-2 at the end of the inning.

Harrison County rallied in the bottom of the fifth when Luke Slucher led off with a single but was forced at second for the first out. Case stole second and scored on Gus Garrison's single and Garrison scored on Stroub's single for the winning run.

Nathan Fryman and Spencer Free combined to allow six hits walking four and striking out nine.

Five Thorobreds had one base hit each for the Breds' total.

On Thursday, Louisville Eastern brought a deceptive 3-10 record to the Hilltop and left with a 5-0 win over Harrison County.

Senior Mark Taylor started for Harrison County pitching the first four innings before giving way to Reese Asher in the fifth.

Eastern scored all five of its runs off Taylor, who did not have his usual command of the strike zone.

Taylor dodged a scoring threat in the second but Eastern scored twice in the third and three times in the fourth to cause Coach Mac Whitaker to insert the left-handed Asher.

Asher was a little wild in his first inning, walking two but settled down and held Eastern to no hits in his three innings.

While the pitchers were battling, the hitters put up little resistance as they scratched out only five hits and only had two runners reach third base.

Eastern's Kyle Burkert pitched six innings, giving up four hits striking out five and walking two. Connor Hess came into the game in the seventh and immediately walked Slucher but Claypool hit into a double play.

Brett Persinger then doubled over the right fielder's head but Free struck out to end the game.

On Friday night, Fleming County's Aaron James pitched a complete game five-hitter as the Panthers improved to 6-10 with an 8-3 victory on the Hilltop.

James was wild in the first and the Breds took advantage of the three walks and an error issued to score two runs to regain the lead.

Fleming County had scored a run in the first on James' single and a double by shortstop T.J. Miller.

Claypool started for the Thorobreds and after the first inning, breezed through the Panther lineup until the fifth inning.

Leading 3-1 going into the fifth, Claypool gave up a lead-off double to James. The next batter walked and again Miller drove in James for a 3-2 Thorobreds lead.

Whitaker replaced Claypool on the mound with Dillon Arnold. An error and a base hit scored two more runs before an out was registered on a strike out.

Two more pitchers came in but the Fleming County team was not to be denied as they put together four straight base hits to make the fifth a seven-run inning giving them the 8-3 win.

The loss dropped the Thorobreds to 13-3 for the year with a Tuesday night match up on the Hilltop against Pendleton County, the next chance to stop the two-game losing streak.

Monday night's game at Mason County was cancelled due to rain.

Track

fifth in the 110M hurdles and Short was fifth in the 400M dash.

The boys' meet was won by Scott County with 113 points followed by Woodford County with 77.

Boyle County was third with Anderson County, Western Hills and Harrison County next. Danville, Franklin County and Burgin wrapped up the team scoring.

"I have never seen a season like this one," bemoaned Coach Danny Simpson. "We have had three cancellations and only two meets. It is very difficult for the athletes to prepare with all of the rainy, cold weather. Fortunately, our athletes have a positive attitude and are continuing to work hard to prepare."

The track team's next outing is this Saturday's Harrison County Invitational in the Athletic Complex. The meet is scheduled to begin at 10 a.m.

HARRISON COUNTY SHERIFF'S REPORT
TRAFFIC CASES

April 13 -- At 7:27 p.m., a non-injury accident occurred on Ky. 1940 about two miles east of the city limits. David Nunley of Olive Hill, Ky. and William Pemberton of Morning Glory Road were driving in opposite directions. As they passed on the narrow road, the side mirrors collided and snapped off.

CASE REPORTS

April 10 --At 6 a.m., Gary Adams of Morning Glory Road reported the theft of several power tools from a building on his property. Evidence showed forcible entry, the report said.

April 13 -- At 8:20 p.m., Ashley O'Brien reported receiving harassing phone calls from Robert Custard. The individuals have a minor child in common. The calls were reported as ranging from threatening to an intent to kill her father. O'Brien was advised to seek an EPO against Custard.

April 14 -- At 9 a.m., Kenny Moore of Shadynook Pike reported the theft of power tools from his garage. An unidentified person busted into his garage through a window to get at the tools.

CITATIONS

April 14 -- At 8:43 a.m., Alicia Plumeri, 31, of Davis Lane was arrested for disorderly conduct at the Harrison County Sheriff's Office. Plumeri and her two children, ages 3 and 1, were listed as missing persons on April 13. Deputy Sheriff Nathan Gasser located Plumeri and her children. She was directed to the Sheriff's office to meet with Social Services to develop a safety plan for her infant and toddler. According to the report, Plumeri became disorderly, cursing loudly in the parking lot and in the office. The deputy warned her twice to discontinue the behavior. She persisted and was eventually placed under arrest.

April 14 -- A criminal summons was issued to Kevin Holbert of Second Street to answer a charge of theft by deception, cold checks under $500.

April 15 -- At 12:30 a.m. arrest warrants were executed against Harry "Corky" Clark, 45, of Village Drive in Lexington. There were four charges against him, including 4th degree assault, 2nd degree wanton endangerment, and two counts of contempt of court.

HMH ranked 5th in Best Places to Work in Kentucky

Harrison Memorial Hospital (HMH) was recognized and honored at the Best Places to Work in Kentucky 11th annual Awards Dinner on April 14 at the Lexington Heritage Hall. The final rankings were announced at the event, and HMH ranked fifth out of 36 in the medium business category. This is the highest HMH has ranked in the five years of participating in the awards program.

"We are delighted and proud to receive a prestigious honor for Harrison Memorial Hospital," says Dr. Brian Mulberry, Chairman of the HMH Board of Directors. "It is a testimony to the hard work and dedication of more than 300 highly skilled, highly dedicated professionals in both clinical and non-clinical fields.

The awards program was created in 2005 and is a project of the Kentucky Chamber of Commerce, Kentucky Society for Human Resource Management Council and Best Companies Group.

This statewide survey and awards program was designed to identify, recognize and honor the best places of employment in Kentucky, benefiting the state's economy, workforce and businesses. The Best Places to Work in Kentucky 2015 list is made up of 90 companies.

"I've believed for years that Harrison Memorial Hospital is a special place to spend a career. Earning this honor five times in a row only reinforces my belief that our hospital sets the bar for other places of employment," said Sheila Currans, HMH Chief Executive Officer. "But it's important to note that our people and their love for and commitment to what they do make HMH the great place it is. And our patients benefit from that."

Mulch, mold and fungi

By Jessica Barnes, County extension agent for horticulture

Mulch can be beneficial in many ways on plant beds, around foundation shrubs and other gardening locations in your yard, but mold can threaten its benefits.

In landscape beds and gardens, mulch helps control weeds, prevent extreme soil temperature fluctuation, decrease water evaporation and improve drainage. Mulch also reduces mower and string trimmer damage on shrubs and trees by suppressing vegetation near their trunks. As it decomposes, mulch produces organic materials to improve soil and otherwise benefit plants. You need to periodically re-apply mulch to continually get these benefits.

Nuisance fungi occasionally grow on mulch. They include shotgun fungus, slime molds, stinkhorns, earthstars and toadstools.

The shotgun fungus shoots masses of tiny black spore structures onto adjacent surfaces such as vehicles and home siding. Slime molds are more unsightly than harmful. They don't cause plant diseases and aren't parasitic. Slime mold spores usually appear from late spring to fall. Abundant wet weather stimulates aboveground appearance of these fungi that initially appear slimy but quickly become dry and powdery when converting into spore masses.

You'll often see slime molds quickly appear and usually disappear in one to two weeks. They tend to reproduce in the same location every year. Fungicide use isn't recommended because slime molds aren't harmful.

When mulch hasn't been composted, it might contain fungi that cause plant diseases. This situation is rare, however, and only occurs in non-composted mulch.

Plant material fertility problems can arise when fungi in decomposing mulch remove nitrogen from the soil. Insufficient moisture problems can develop when fungi permeate thick layers of dry mulch creating a surface that's difficult for water to penetrate. To gain the most benefit, you should use composted mulch with a high bark content and little wood material. Avoid finely ground, woody products that haven't been composted.

If you buy fresh wood chips from a tree-maintenance firm, add water to the chips and allow them to partially compost for about six weeks. If this material doesn't have fresh leaves, you can add some nitrogen to speed up the process.

Avoid using fresh or partially composted wood chips near the house foundation because they can provide a food source for termites.

Immediately after you put mulch around plants or trees, soak it with water to enhance bacterial activity to initiate decomposition. Also, periodically wet the mulch during the growing season. Avoid soured mulch because it tends to injure plants. You can spot sour mulch by its acrid odor.

Farmer of the Year applications being accepted

The 2015 Kentucky Farm Bureau (KFB) "Farmer of the Year" application process is now open, and the organization is seeking the Commonwealth's finest nominees for this prestigious award.

KFB initiated a "Farmer of the Year" awards program as a way to recognize its members for their commitment to excellence in agriculture, efficiency in farming practices, sound financial management and outstanding leadership in their county Farm Bureau and other civic organizations. Eligibility and guidelines are included with the application, which can be downloaded now at kyfb.com/federation/. All applications must be postmarked by July 1.

The competition's entrants will be narrowed down to just the top three applicants over the summer, and finalists will be announced in mid-August. Judges will visit the three finalists in mid-September to conduct interviews and see their operations in action. The winner will be announced at the organization's 2015 state annual meeting in Louisville on December 4.

KFB's "Farmer of the Year" will receive $1,000 from Kentucky Farm Bureau Federation and will be presented with a commemorative award during the organization's annual meeting in December. State finalists will receive $250 from Kentucky Farm Bureau Federation.

In addition to the statewide recognition and prizes, KFB's "Farmer of the Year" winner will represent Kentucky in the Swisher Sweets/Sunbelt Ag Expo Southeastern "Farmer of the Year" contest, the South's most prestigious agricultural award, in Moultrie, Georgia, October 18-20, 2016. Last year's state winner received $2,500 from Swisher International, a $500 gift certificate from Southern States Cooperative, the choice of either $1,000 in PhytoGen cottonseed or a $500 donation to a designated charity from Dow AgroSciences, and a Columbia vest from Ivey's Outdoor and Farm Supply. Kentucky's winner will compete against nine other state winners for the chance to win a $15,000 award from Swisher International and several other sponsor-based prizes.
